Saddam more brutal than Hitler, Bush says

Associated Press

ANDOVER, Fla. — President Bush pressed a verbal attack against Saddam Hussein on Thursday, suggesting the Iraqi leader had "become more brutal than Hitler in some sorts of brutality and pledging to aggression turned back."

"I don't think the status quo can go on forever," Bush said. "I don't know how long is long."

"I want to have a peaceful resolution (to the gulf crisis) ... I am not ruling out further options, and I am not trying to prepare our country for war."

Germany and said there was an "awful similarity." He told reporters he believed that "Hitler did not stake people out against military targets, and he did indeed respect the legitimacy of the embassies."

He said there was a valid comparison to be made between the behavior of Iraq's invading force in Kuwait and the way Nazis brutalized Poland at the beginning of World War II.

Bush also was asked about his wife's comments that he would be willing to meet with Saddam to resolve the crisis. He didn't exactly embrace the idea, but he said his position at any such meeting would be "No condition, no negotiation, just leave" Kuwait.

"There is no flexibility on our position. There is no compromise," Bush scoffed at Saddam's offer to permit families to visit the hostages during Thanksgiving and Christmas. "I see it as a ploy," said Bush, adding that the hostages should be freed for family reunions at home.

"I don't think he'll win the humanitarian of the year award" for the offer, Bush said, and he reiterated government advice that Americans not travel into Iraq or occupied Kuwait.

Bush said the United States has "no argument with the Iraqi people, none at all. We bear no hostility to the Iraqi people. ... our problem is with Saddam Hussein alone."

Bush also said he still plans to give time for the United Nations-imposed economic sanctions against Iraq to work.

"I want desperately to have a peaceful resolution to this crisis," Bush told a political gathering in Burlington. "I hope there will never be a shot fired in anger ... no one wants a peaceful end to this crisis more than I do, but no one is more determined to see his aggression turned back than I am, and I will not change on that," he said.

"We will not rule out the military option," Fitzwater said.

Iraq expressed renewed fears that the United States will use reports of hostage maltreatment as a pretext to launch a military strike.

An Iraqi Information Minister, announcing plans to free four sick and elderly Americans, denied the captives were being treated badly. About 1,000 Americans are believed to be held in Iraq and Kuwait.

"All the Americans at sites have complete freedom. They can watch TV, read books and read newspapers," he told reporters in Baghdad. "They also enjoy the friendship of Iraqi forces."

The official Iraqi News Agency identified the four to be freed as Randall Trinh, Dr. Abdul Kanji, Raymond Galles and Michael Barnes. It did not give their ages or home towns or say when they would be freed.

Iraq offered Wednesday to allow holiday visits by relatives of hostages, but State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler on Thursday branded the offer "shameless ... cruel and insensitive."

Saddam, she said, "should not be discussing visits. He should be discussing the immediate release today of all those held against their will."

As tensions rose, Bush's wife, Barbara, on a campaign stop in Omaha, Neb., said the president would do whatever he could to end the crisis, including meeting with Saddam.

"I think he would consider anything to get the Kuwaitis back in their own country, and to get our men out," she said.

Death toll in India tops 210

Associated Press

AYODHYA, India — Religious riots sparked by Hindu fundamentalists' attempt to seize a Moslem mosque intensified Thursday, and the death toll in nine days of clashes rose to more than 200.

News agencies and officials reported at least 31 people died across the country on Thursday. They were killed in battles between Hindus and Moslems, or when police fired on mobs, or when victims died in hospitals of injuries suffered in earlier riots.

At least 210 people have died since Oct. 24, when the fighting began.

Most of the deaths were in Uttar Pradesh, the state where the disputed shrine is located, and in Gujarat state. Both states have a history of sectarian clashes and simmering tensions between Hindus and Moslems.

Uttar Pradesh is India's most populous state. At least 30 percent of its 120 million people are Moslems. Violence has erupted in 22 of its 63 districts, according to police officials in Lucknow, the state capital.

The dispute has also caused riots in neighboring Bangladesh, an Islamic nation, where Moslem mobs attacked temples and Hindu shops and homes after hearing of the violence in India.

At least one person was killed in Dhaka, which is under curfew along with the port city of Chittagong.

In Ayodhya, site of the disputed mosque, the bodies of three Hindus were found Thursday in the Saryu River.

Vice President Dan Quayle made a stop on the campaign trail Thursday to give support to Karl Snow, Republican candidate for the 3rd Congressional District.

David Beckwith, press secretary for the vice-president, said this year Quayle has visited 42 states and 92 or 93 cities. "I've lost track," he said. Quayle plugged the Republican Party at each stop.

Quayle was met outside his plane by Karl Snow and was hurried into a hangar to get out of the wind and rain.

Also there to greet Quayle were Utah Senators Orrin Hatch and Jake Garn.

Quayle spent the morning in Grand Island, Neb., and Mason City, Iowa, before landing Air Force II at the Provo Airport. Quayle then continued on to Tucson, Ariz., and Los Angeles.

Quayle denied any reports that he was on the campaign trail for himself.

KSL loses news vice president

Kinard resigns amid controversy

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — The voice of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir's weekly broadcasts, J. Spencer Kinard, resigned from KSL Television after his friendship with an anchorwoman created friction in the newsroom, a spokesman said Thursday.

A choir spokesman said no decision had been reached by leaders of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on whether Kinard would continue as announcer for the choir's "Music and the Spoken Word" program, a post he has held for 18 years.

Kinard offered his resignation as vice president for news and public affairs in a letter Wednesday to Bill Murdoch, KSL vice president.

"I am convinced that the events over the past few weeks have made it impossible for me to be effective in that position," Kinard wrote. "Please inform the newsroom staff of my decision."

Kinard's resignation after 18 years as news director came two weeks after a staff meeting in which Kinard, 50, sought to quell controversy sur-

"I am here for Karl Snow," Quayle said. "We want him to be the next Congressman in this Congressional District. What we really need is a good voter turnout and to have more Republicans in Congress."

He came to visit the 3rd District because it is an open seat that has traditionally been strong Republican.

"Congress is controlled by the Democrats," Quayle said. "It is much more important to have a friend of the President in Congress, not a friend of liberal Democrats."

When asked if he supported a limitation on congressional terms Quayle said there was a feeling of frustration in America. "People are sick and tired of what is going on in Washington," he said. He would support a change from two to four years for Representatives' terms. "If there is a limit on terms," Quayle suggested a 12-year limit on terms.

At a Karl Snow rally held at Utah Valley Community College, Quayle said, "People want to see a change, and the way to bring about that change is to give the president a Republican Congress."

He said it is Republican presidential leadership that is responsible for many of the political changes in the world.

"It is Republican presidents who helped bring down the Berlin Wall, and it is a Republican president who decided to rally the world against Saddam Hussein," he said.

Quayle also touched on the crisis in the Persian Gulf. He said President Bush has rallied the world, and 27 nations now support the president's policy. "The world is united for peace, and the world is united against Saddam Hussein."

This is the first time in 20 years that a vice president has visited Utah. Snow supporters hope this visit will have positive results in the Nov. 6 election.

"I know Karl Snow through Jake Garn and Orrin Hatch," Quayle said.

"They've told me what kind of person he is. As you can predict BYU will go to another great bowl game, I also predict Karl Snow is going to Washington this January," he said.

"I am convinced that the events over the past few weeks have made it impossible for me to be effective in that position."

rounding his friendship with noon anchorwoman Jennifer Howe, 24.

After Kinard left the meeting, some KSL staffers threatened to resign if he remained, claiming their boss was lying when he denied having been seen with Howe on several occasions outside the newsroom.

On Oct. 19, the day after the staff meeting, Kinard was given "medical leave" from KSL and from his role as the voice of the choir's weekly CBS Radio Network broadcast.

The broadcast, which began in 1929, is the network's longest-running continuous program.

Wendell Smoot, choir president, said Thursday that "no decision has been made" about Kinard's choir position, considered a church assignment.

"I can't help you a bit on it. I have no comment on it at all," Smoot said.

Kinard's future with the choir rests with the LDS Church's governing First Presidency. KSL Inc. is the flagship of church-owned Bonneville International Corp.

Kinard's relationship with Howe was the subject of an Associated Press story Sunday in which he said he expected to return to both jobs. However, in his letter, Kinard said he had reconsidered.

"After careful consideration over the past few days, and after discussions with my wife and family, I have decided to resign as Vice President of news-public affairs at KSL Television," Kinard wrote.

Murdoch said he had spoken to Kinard by telephone Wednesday, but he declined to say what was said. Kinard's son said his father was not

McDonald's is eliminating foam boxes

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The plastic foam boxes that cradle millions of Big Macs and other sandwiches — boxes an environmentalist called "a huge symbol of the throwaway society" — are being eliminated, McDonald's said Thursday.

Under pressure from environmental groups, which say the clamshell boxes add to the nation's overflowing garbage crisis, McDonald Corp. President Edward Rensi said the company had decided "to do what's right."

"Although some scientific studies indicate that foam packaging is environmentally sound, our customers just don't feel good about it," Rensi said in a telephone interview from the company's suburban Oak Brook headquarters. "So we're changing."

Rensi said McDonald's will begin eliminating the sandwich containers — which account for nearly 75 percent of its total foam use — in the United States within 60 days. He said no timetable had been set for phasing it out at its restaurants abroad.

First to go will be the plastic foam sandwich boxes, which will be re-

Life spans may be limited to age 85

WASHINGTON — Humans may soon expect an average lifetime of 85 years, but probably not much more even if medical science defeats all of the major killer diseases, researchers say.

An average life expectancy of four score and five may be the upper limit because the human body by then is slowly deteriorating from a cascade of aging effects, said S. Jay Olshansky, a researcher at the University of Chicago.

Science, he said, has yet to find a way to overcome this apparent design of nature.

"Even if we found a cure for most fatal diseases, such as heart disease and cancer, the natural degeneration of the body puts a cap of about 85 years on the average age of death," Olshansky and two co-authors report in the current issue of the journal Science.

"If we keep making progress as we have made in the past, then a baby born today can expect to live 100 years," said James Vaupel of the University of Minnesota. "There may well be some biological barriers, but we are spending a lot of money on biomedical research, and the sciences are poised to make some really significant breakthroughs."

Vaupel said that women in some populations already are approaching life expectancies of 85. The life expectancy of some women belonging to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is almost 85, he said.

Lawyers prepare to pick potty parity panel

HOUSTON — Lawyers began picking a panel Thursday in a case of potty parity.

Denise Wells, a 33-year-old legal secretary, is being tried for using the men's restroom at a concert. Her trip to the toilet made national news and led to talk-show appearances with Johnny Carson, Geraldo Rivera and Joan Rivers.

But on Thursday she was barred by her lawyer and sister, Valerie Wells Davenport, from talking to reporters.

She was ticketed for allegedly violating a city ordinance that bars members of one sex from using a public restroom designed for members of the opposite sex in a manner calculated to cause a disturbance.

She faces up to a $200 fine if convicted of the misdemeanor.

Some states, including New York and Virginia, have approved so-called potty parity regulations that give women as many or more toilets than men to compensate for the extra time that women can take.

Voter apathy could hurt Republicans

WASHINGTON — The safest prediction about the 1990 election is this: Most Americans won't vote Tuesday, and that spells potential trouble for Republican candidates.

"Low turnout generally hurts us," said Norman Cummings, political director of the Republican National Committee. "Those marginal voters are Republican-leaning voters in many key states."

Curtis Gans, director of the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate, predicts a turnout of about the same as 1986, the last non-presidential election year.

That year, 36.4 percent of eligible voters cast ballots, the lowest turnout since 1942.

"It's a more iffy situation this year than at any time I can remember," said Gans, who forecasts turnout with some success every election year.

There is a widespread belief, fortified by polls, that the electorate is fed up with politics and politicians. That could prompt an outpouring of votes against officeholders, but it also could prompt many Americans to stay home Election Day.

GOP charged with intimidating voters

WASHINGTON — Democrats charged Thursday that Republicans are trying to intimidate minority voters in North Carolina and Texas and asked the attorney general to step in to protect voting rights.

The Democrats said postcards the GOP mailed to voters in heavily black sections of North Carolina and East Texas contained misleading or outright false information.

"We stopped the Republicans in 1982 and in 1986 from conducting these despicable activities. Democrats stand ready to do it again," party chairman Ron Brown said in a statement from Chicago.

In a hand-delivered letter to Attorney General Dick Thornburgh and John Dunne, the assistant attorney general for civil rights, Brown asked for an immediate investigation into possible civil rights violations.

"The need for speedy action is obvious," Brown said. He added that the activity reported this year in North Carolina and Texas "may be just the tip of the iceberg."

Bid to reopen environmental study denied

PROVO — The Rock Canyon Preservation Alliance's bid to reopen the Seven Peaks Ski Resort environmental impact study has been rebuffed, but the group still will push for amending the Uinta National Forest plan.

Alliance members submitted the proposed amendment to the forest's Land and Resource Management Plan on Oct. 17. The amendment would prohibit commercial development and protect watershed lands in Provo's east mountains. However, the Forest Service decided Oct. 19 to hold on to the alliance proposal until the redrafting process of the forest plan begins in 1991 or 1992.

The land protected in the alliance proposal includes land involved in the proposed Seven Peaks project.

Alliance members had hoped the Forest Service would reopen the environmental impact statement evaluating the Seven Peaks ski resort proposal — and insert their proposed amendment as an alternative to the resort.

At a meeting Wednesday, alliance members were told the Forest Service could not reopen the Seven Peaks impact statement.

Local candidates focus on taxes

By CHAD G. DAYBELL
Universe Staff Writer

A better climate for industry must be developed in order to bring more businesses into the 66th District, said the Republican candidate for the district's state congressional seat.

"We must increase revenue but not by further taxation of the people," Charlie Bates said.

Bates is running against incumbent Democrat Tim Moran and American Party candidate Florence Bale.

Moran said, "In order for small businesses and established industries to grow we must broaden our economic base and preserve and improve our agricultural base."

Moran said he is working for tax reform without increasing taxes. "Taxes must be fair and equal to all citizens, and the tax money must be used wisely."

Bates said the 66th District is ready for further economic development.

Bale, who is currently the state and national treasurer of the American Party, finds the current sales tax on food "immoral." She is concerned about where legislators would shift taxes to gain additional revenue if Initiative A passes and the food sales tax was removed.

Bates and Moran both said they oppose Initiative A on the same basis.

"It would be a mistake to remove the tax. We need the revenue in our state, and we'd need to take the revenue from somewhere else," said Bates.

Candidates for the 67th District seat, which includes all of Utah County south of the Spanish Fork River, are concerned with federal environmental issues.

"Extreme environmentalism hurts because it ties up the resources," said Bill Wright, the Republican incumbent.

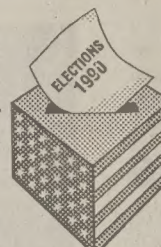

Wright said the environment should be a local responsibility since problems vary in each part of the state.

American Party candidate O. Dean Pendleton, said the earth is here for the benefit of humanity. "The earth's resources should not be closed off from our use."

Daniels, an elementary school teacher, believes a decrease in classroom sizes must be an educational priority. "It is hard to deal individually with each student, which is important in the learning process."

American Party candidates Bale and Pendleton both emphasized the importance of avoiding a second Constitutional Convention, which they say would put our basic rights in danger.

"This second Constitutional Convention is an excuse for subversive groups to throw out our current U.S. Constitution and write a new one," said Bale.

placed by paper products manufactured in a new process that preserves the food's temperature and freshness, Rensi said. The company is still trying to determine suitable replacements for plastic cutlery and the plastic cups in which coffee is served, he said.

Rensi said the move would mean a "significant reduction" in the volume of packaging used by McDonald's.

A number of U.S. towns and cities have banned the use of polystyrene, saying it not only contributes to the growing shortage of landfill space, but also is made with chemicals that harm the atmosphere's protective ozone layer.

Environmentalists praised the decision, but a spokesman for the packaging industry said McDonald's was folding under pressure not fact-based.

Library aims to minimize book damage

JUSTIN GERDY
Universe Staff Writer

and preservation of library materials is the focus of a new creative campaign launched by the Harold B. Lee Library this year, said a library representative.

Part of the "Preservation in the 90s" campaign, the library has commissioned McKay, director of the BYU Communications Arts Department, to design a graphic campaign that stresses proper care and handling of books. Karen Ellis of the library's Administration Office said Silverman, preservationarian at the library, said the campaign is intended to involve staff and patron in the process of care and handling to help conserve the library's resources.

The campaign stresses the "Seven Deadly Sins of Book Handling," and is intended to "elicit public support to minimize damage to borrowed materials," Silverman said.

The Seven Deadly Sins of Book Handling

Pride: not reporting accidental damage

Idleness: not protecting material from the elements

Gluttony: eating or drinking while using library materials

Lechery: highlighting, underlining, or removing parts of books

Avarice: careless photocopying

Envy: coveting library material

Wrath: rough or careless handling

The primary mission of the library is to keep materials available for patron use, Silverman said. "This campaign is directed at overcoming the deluge of material needing repairs, so we can keep the books available for patron use," he said.

Currently the library repairs about 14,000 books annually, Silverman said. "Any form of use damages material, but there is a point that exceeds fair use," Silverman said. "We want to increase awareness that books are a finite resource that can be used up."

"We are really concerned about damage to the library's material. We want to make a real effort as a community to be aware of how fragile library material is," Silverman said.

The main goal of the campaign is to develop a greater sense of responsibility from the borrower.

"Every ding or whack is cumulative and results in down-time for the item when it needs repair," he said. Not only does this involve monetary expense, but it also bears a cost for others when the book they need is unavailable because it is being repaired.

"Sins" that do the most damage to library materials include underlining, careless photocopying, rough or careless handling, eating or drinking while using books and not protecting materials from the elements, Silverman said.

The library will start distributing "rainy-day bags" at the circulation desk to help protect materials from inclement weather.

Another aspect of the "Preservation in the 90s" campaign is the closing of book drops and implementation of hand receipt of all checked-out items, Silverman said.

"Patrons have become so accustomed to using book drops that a library seems incomplete without one," Silverman said.

"But their convenience results in needless damage to books. Once a book is damaged it has to be taken out of circulation until it can be repaired," he said.

Of the seven "sins," Silverman feels underlining is the biggest problem.

Not only does it damage the book itself, but it inconveniences others that want to use the book, he said. It is distracting to read a book that someone else has marked in.

Magleby based the "seven deadly sins" approach on a woodcut from a 1589 book, "The Faerie Queene." Magleby and copywriter Norman Darais adapted the sins to a book care theme, he said.

Educator still fighting to regain full identity

WAKEFIELD
Universe Staff Writer

After 10 years of hard work, a BYU educator says he is still trying to regain his full identity.

60, 65-year-old John A. Green said a severe stroke immediately after a freak accident that occurred during a handball game. The stroke left him void of all memory.

The only thing Green, a French teacher for 45 years, could remember was his first name, his wife's first name and the names of five of his nine children.

When doctors declared it a mystery how his mind could blank out my mastered languages, including French, which left me in silence for a half. I forgot all my years of teaching, so my Ph.D. was gone. I was empty," Green said.

Everything was wiped out of his mind; everything but his ability to fight back.

He had two choices," he said. "I could sit around the house doing nothing, which I did for two months, or I could make myself useful. I decided to make myself useful."

He regained his mastery in French, and started attending the beginning

French class at BYU. He dropped out because it was too hard, and he began reading the hundreds of French books found in his office.

Green speaks in halting English; however, it is clear enough to express his incredible attitude.

"I am glad that I had this experience," Green said.

"I have gained more from this than from anything I could have ever done. I realize now more than ever that we are on this earth to be tested, and I pray to God that I passed the test," he said.

Green said, "The worst part of this whole experience was my loss of testimony. I forgot God."

"But I rebuilt practically everything else, and along with everything else, I have found my testimony in God once again."

"Now it is stronger than it was, and it is growing stronger every day that I live," he said.

Green's efforts have not gone unnoticed at BYU or in his profession.

BYU has honored him with the David O. McKay Award from the Department of Humanities and the BYUSA Brigham Award.

Green was also honored for his research on Marcel Schwob, a 19th-century journalist.

Clubs to raise funds at Friday Night Live

WEDEN WEIGHT
Universe Staff Writer

The biggest carnival students have ever been to will take place tonight in the Ernest L.eson Center, event organizers said.

Friday Night Live is "one of the biggest events of the year," said John Liechty, 25, program director of the undergraduate student in statistics from Provo. It features such events as the Dating Game, Pre-Shorts and Concerts Impromptu.

The event is held as a fund-raising activity for on-campus clubs, Liechty said. "It's really the only time on campus have an opportunity to raise funds."

Booths will be set up in the Garden Court. Many of the clubs will sell food, including ethnic food, Liechty said.

Events director Melinda Carter, 24, a zoology major from Twin Falls, Idaho, described the event as being similar to a carnival. Ticket prices for the events will range from $1 to $2. The air band competitions and the dance will cost $2, Carter said. The laser show will cost $1.

Laser tag will cost 50 cents for five minutes. The Dating Game and Concerts Impromptu will be free, she said.

Mike Sant, executive director of BYUSA and the United Club Council, said there would be about 20 to 25 clubs participating in the event. The money raised will be divided among the clubs.

The inter-club, lip-synce air band competition will be one of the most exciting events at FNL, Liechty said.

Carter said the winning band will be able to perform again at the dance later in the evening.

For the dance, multi-leveled risers will be placed on the floor of the Memorial Lounge to form a pyramid in the center, Liechty said.

Also performing at FNL will be comedian John Bytheway, who will be the master of ceremonies at the Dating Game.

Liechty said the comedian has done work for the Church Educational System and is a favorite of Especially For Youth programs.

COMPETITION

Wiesel Prize in Ethics — The Wiesel Foundation for Humanity is sponsoring an essay contest to challenge undergraduate senior students to give answers to and to analyze the ethical questions facing students today. The contest will offer the following prizes: 1st Prize, $5,000; 2nd Prize, $3,000; 3rd Prize, $2,000 and three honorable mentions. Essays should be between 3,000 and 5,000 words. Further details concerning deadlines, etc., will be posted in the Maeser Building. More than three essays will be submitted from any one college or university. Entries must be submitted through the Associate Dean of General and Honors Education, 350C MSRB. Submission deadline is Dec. 20.

Today's Best College Student Competition — USA Today, in cooperation with several associations of higher education, has announced a competition to name the nation's best college students. Undergraduate students will be named to the 1991 All-USA Academic Team. Twenty first team members will be invited to receive their awards at a ceremony in Washington D.C., and each first team member will receive a $2,500 cash award. Any full-time undergraduate student is eligible but must be nominated by a faculty member, familiar with the student's work, and an administrator.

Selection criteria are designed to find students who excel in scholarship and leadership roles on and off campus. The judges will be influenced by the student's ability to describe their outstanding endeavor in his or her own words. The judges will rely solely on the student's ability to describe the effort in writing, supplemented by recommendations from a nominating professor and three other persons of the nominee's choice.

For application forms come to 350 MSRB. Deadline for applications is Nov. 30.

Continuous Improvement For Increased Productivity Awards — Sponsored by BYU Alumni, this student manuscript contest is to encourage student involvement in applying the concept of continuous improvement for increased productivity in business and other organizations. All full-time or part-time undergraduate and masters students at BYU are eligible to enter.

Five outstanding papers will receive a $1,000 cash award, 5 excellent papers will receive $500 and 25 superior papers will receive $100. Submission deadlines is Jan. 15, 1991.

For further guidelines and information contact Dr. Kevin Stocks, 538 TNRB, 378-4613.

Pres. Lee to defend 30 gas companies in Supreme Court

By TONYA R. JEPSSON
Universe Staff Writer

On Nov. 5, BYU President Rex E. Lee will once again be arguing before the Supreme Court of the United States.

This will be President Lee's 54th case and his fourth case since he became president of BYU.

Paul Richards, director of public communications, said President Lee will be defending 30 major gas companies in a suit being brought against them by the Oil and Gas Pipeline Company.

"It (the case) involves the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and the raise of the price ceiling for natural gas," Richards said.

President Lee arrived in Washington on Thursday.

Student benefit concert to help starving children

By STEPHANIE L. PERRY
Universe Staff Writer

A committee of BYU students is taking action to help the millions of children dying each year from starvation and preventable diseases.

Students for UNICEF will be holding a benefit concert featuring three local bands Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at Provo High School. The bands include Swim, Herschel Swim, The Relatives and Holden Caulfield.

Jennifer Meekins, 20, a junior majoring in zoology from Delaware and co-director of the event, said the concert is not only to raise money but to increase community awareness about UNICEF's purpose as well.

UNICEF, the United Nations Children's Fund, has programs around the world, especially in Third World countries, that help give food, water and medicine to needy children living there, said Suzanne Condie, 21, a senior majoring in journalism from Litchfield, Ariz. and communications director for Students for Unicef.

The fund-raiser is part of an honors environmental biology class taught by Sam Rushforth and Gary Bryner, Condie said.

Rushforth, a professor of biology, said the students work in groups. Each group must identify a problem, find possible solutions to the problem and then take action towards solving the problem.

He said the class is working on six different projects.

"I consider all of us to have an enormous responsibility to the earth and

"The children are innocent victims of what their society has done."

— Jennifer Meekins
Concert Co-director

this includes the people of the earth," said Rushforth.

Heather Moorehead, 18, a freshman from Minneapolis, Minn. majoring in political science, said, "I think it (the project) is a good opportunity to help people who have things we don't have."

Jake Hawley, 18, a freshman from Minneapolis, Minn. majoring in secondary education, said he isn't enrolled in the class but wanted to help out.

"It's a good chance for me to do something besides just donate money," he said.

Meekins said, "It takes so little money to make a significant contribution."

Rushforth said 50 cents will provide a year's worth of vitamins and minerals along with some immunizations for a needy child.

Condie said 25 cents will feed a child for a day in an emergency situation, and $5 will immunize a child against six childhood diseases.

Meekins said the birthrates are so high and the standard of living so low in these developing countries that parents are unable to take care of all their children.

"The children are innocent victims of what their society has done. It is our responsibility to help anyone we can," she said.

Condie said, "Forty thousand kids die every day from lack of food or medicine. I think that is an amazing number. If we can save a few kids, that's wonderful."

Tickets for the concert are $3 and can be purchased at the door or from any committee member.

'Disneyana' comes to Provo

By JANNAE DURFEY
Universe Staff Writer

Disney fans and collectors will have great opportunities to buy, sell and trade Disney items with the opening of the first "Disney Store" in Salt Lake City and the All Disney Show and Sale to be held in Provo this weekend.

Mel Broberg, the president of Utah Valley Castle Club, said the purpose of the show is to share the values Walt Disney demonstrated in his works.

Scott Carrasco, a member of the Castle Club, said the club likes the clean, wholesome fun Walt Disney presented the public.

Broberg said there will be 12 exhibits at the show along with door prizes and a coloring contest for children.

"There will be a lot of stuff that is not available in stores anymore," he said.

Carrasco said the show will be divided up into a trading and selling area and an exhibits-only area. The show and sale will include a wide variety of items from the 1930s through the early 1980s.

Broberg said there will be guidebooks from the first year Disneyland opened, Disney character dolls from the 1930s and buttons and pins that are considered to be quite valuable.

Carrasco said one of the exhibitors has some of Disney's original sketchwork, and two others have some original artwork.

Broberg said, "Disneyana," the official name for Disney items, are not only fun to collect but they are also very valuable."

Carrasco said although the collectors are not experts, they can usually give a customer an idea of what an item is worth.

Broberg said since many terminally ill children want to go to a Disney park, the proceeds from the show and sale will go to the Make-A-Wish Foundation.

The Disney Store is a good way to bring the Disney environment closer to home, said Chuck Champlin of Burbank, Calif., the manager of communication for Disney Consumer Products.

Champlin said they are very careful about trying to hire fun, personable employees. "We bend over backwards to give it a special touch."

Film students display original projects

By ERIC A. RUTAR
Universe Staff Writer

Imagine an evening spent with a skinhead music band, models in lingerie and a BYU rockclimbing instructor discussing philosophy. All of this and more will be featured tonight at the debut of the BYU film festival, "Premiere Shorts."

The program will feature several films made by BYU students and will serve as a "long overdue" showcase for the talents of student filmmakers at BYU, said Matt Markestein, 25, a senior majoring in film from Sonoma, Calif. Markestein is the student coordinator of the festival.

The first "Premiere Shorts" festival will display films with several unusual topics and cinematic styles. "Progeny" is a film which was produced by Johnathan Banta, 22, a senior majoring in film from Springfield.

"The film is about the son of a world-class cyclist who attempts to break his dead father's world record," said Banta.

Also featured will be a 20-minute documentary entitled "The All-American Skinhead." The film traces the adventures of a skinhead music band, said Markestein.

A film called "Upward Vertical Movement" will also be shown. It documents the climb a BYU rockclimbing instructor took one day in Rock Canyon, said Tristan Whitman, 22, a film major from Douglas, Wyo., who helped produce the film.

In between each film, Markestein plans to produce a "scoff" fashion show featuring students modeling clothes from the Desert Industries thrift shop. "The idea of a scoff fashion show is fairly traditional, but I'm hoping to give it a new twist by adding music and several 'nontraditional' articles of clothing, like swimsuits and lingerie," he said.

The idea of a BYU student film festival is not a new one. The former student association, ASBYU, sponsored "The Zoobie Film Festival" and "The BYU Film Festival" for six years.

The program was lost during the transition from ASBYU to BYUSA, Markestein said. He resurrected the idea of a student film festival over the summer, and "Premiere Shorts" is the result. The program is sponsored by BYUSA.

The debut of the festival will coincide with BYUSA's program, "Friday Night Live." The festival is set up so students can attend any one of the three showings without missing any of the other events, said Markestein.

The first "Premiere Shorts" program will be held in 321 ELWC. Showtimes are 7:30, 9:15 and 10:30 p.m. A second program, with all new films, will be held on Dec. 7. For more information call BYUSA at 378-3901.

Claymation process not just for raisins anymore

By ERIC A. RUTAR
Universe Staff Writer

The creative process that gave birth to the California Raisins has inspired a Utah film entrepreneur to forge new territory for the clay animation process used in television commercials.

Rick Evans is the president of the Claymation Company, which is based in Salt Lake City. Evans spoke at a Theater and Film department symposium Thursday about the history of the claymation medium and the type of work his company is currently producing.

Claymation began to be taken seriously as a viable advertising medium after the debut of the California

Raisins, Evans said. It was initially perceived to be only a passing fad, but it has grown into a respectable advertising tool.

"Before any clay work is done, we shoot human actors performing the movements we want to replicate in clay," he said. The film is then taken by artists and translated into a separate film featuring clay figures.

The most difficult part of the translation process lies in the accurate transfer of facial and lip movements because the artists must exactly match the clay creations' mouth movements to a predetermined soundtrack, he said.

The backgrounds used are also made of clay, Evans said. The set of one commercial he produced weighed more than 300 pounds. Freelance artists from Salt Lake high schools volunteered several hours to build out tiny clay leaves, which were placed on a clay tree.

Claymation commercials are shot in 35 millimeter film and are then broken down into several segments of 1/30th of a second each. "Sometimes it's very difficult to work and think in segments of less than one second, but it is very rewarding to see a commercial come together," he said.

The clay, called Plasticine, is an oil-based modeling compound. It resists drying and can be melted down and reshaped. It can also be painted so true-to-life colors enhance the claymation effect, he said.

Evans has two full-time employees, but he also uses a large pool of freelance artists. "The claymation medium is very labor intensive and requires several artists working in concert in order to produce a believable commercial," he said.

Because of the complexity of the process, the cost of creating a claymation commercial is extremely high. "We sell one second of production for an average of $1,000," said Evans.

For this reason, he said, claymation has been confined to the television commercial genre, but Evans is hoping he can expand the medium to fill a niche in the feature-length film market.

"I'm hoping to create a feature-length Christmas or Halloween film by next year," he said.

Roy Rogers anxious to leave hospital

Associated Press

APPLE VALLEY, Calif. — Cowboy star Roy Rogers is the "terror of the hallways" and anxious to leave the hospital where he is recovering from heart surgery, said his son.

The 78-year-old actor, who appeared in 87 Westerns, probably will be released from St. Mary Desert Hospital this week, said Roy "Dusty" Rogers Jr. on Wednesday.

Rogers, who turns 79 on Monday, underwent a four-hour operation last month in which doctors replaced a weak spot in his aorta with a graft of Dacron.

Cougars to face Falcons

By DAVID L. HANCOCK
Universe Sports Writer

The No. 9-ranked BYU Cougar football team travels to Colorado this weekend to play the Air Force Academy Falcons in the Cougars' first road game in more than a month.

BYU, now 6-1 overall and 4-0 in Western Athletic Conference play, has only played two away games this season, and now faces three consecutive road games against conference opponents. The Cougars have five games remaining, four of them against WAC teams.

BYU coach LaVell Edwards said it is great for the team to begin November in the hunt for the WAC title, but "we've got some tough road games left. We'll be fine as long as we don't beat ourselves."

Edwards said the key for the Cougars in this game will be to control the Falcons' "textbook execution of the wishbone offense."

Air Force, at 4-4 overall and 2-3 in the WAC, has lead the WAC in rushing offense for eight consecutive years and are leading this season with a 274 yards per game average.

The Cougars have won seven straight games against the Falcons, but Edwards said they have never been able to stop the Falcon rushing offense.

"We've only been able to slow them down and contain their attack. We just try and limit how long they control the ball," Edwards said.

"For us to stop their wishbone we won't line up any differently than we have all year, we just have to discipline ourselves and execute," Edwards said.

This game will match the WAC Players of the Week against each other. Senior fullback Rodney Lewis was named on offense for his 131 yards and 2 touchdowns for Air Force, and Cougar sophomore defensive back Derwin Gray was named on defense for his three interceptions and touchdown against New Mexico.

Against University of Utah last week, Air Force jumped out to a quick 31-0 lead in the first quarter on their way to 52-21 win. The Falcons scored on their first six possessions of the game and finished the game with 403 yards rushing.

The rushing game has been a very productive offensive weapon for the Falcons this year. They are the only Division I-A team in the nation that has yet to score a passing touchdown this season.

Although it has been an up and down season for the Falcons because of injuries, Coach Fisher DeBerry said his "players have maintained a positive attitude. I'm looking forward to a good game Saturday."

The last meeting between these two teams resulted in a 50-39 BYU win in Provo. Reserve Stacy Corley set an NCAA record in that game by returning two kickoffs for touchdowns, one for 99 yards and the other for 85 yards.

Kickoff time for the game is scheduled for noon Saturday. The game will be televised live by KSL-TV and also carried on KSL Radio.

UTAH COUNTY ATTORNEY Vote For Change

- Graduate of BYU Law School
- Police officer, detective & sergeant for 10 years
- Trial lawyer in private practice for 10 years
- Utah veteran of Vietnam
- Two (2) years with Salt Lake County Attorney's Office
- Editor of two (2) military newspapers
- Six (6) years as manager of a financial institution
- Father of eleven (11) children
- Active in church & civic activities for many years
- Active member of the Utah & Washington State Bar Associations
- Author of several books on law enforcement
- Active in handicap affairs
- Licensed to practice law before the U.S. Supreme Court

VOTE FOR EXPERIENCE THAT COUNTS

CIVIL EXPERIENCE

COLLINS has litigated major civil cases such as the one recently tried against the county for $250,000. BRYSON doesn't say what his civil experience is, but claims that the County Attorney's job is mostly criminal prosecution, notwithstanding that only 40 to 45 percent of the County Attorney's budget is for criminal prosecution.

LAW ENFORCEMENT

COLLINS has been a police patrolman, detective and detective sergeant for 10 years and written two (2) books on law enforcement. BRYSON has no law enforcement experience.

TAX DOLLARS

COLLINS has suggested methods to obtain federal grants and reduce the tax burden for victim services. BRYSON says things are fine the way they are now and offers nothing new.

MANAGEMENT

COLLINS brings six (6) years private sector management experience as well as government training in management and supervision to Utah County and has a degree in military finance. BRYSON has no experience in these areas. COLLINS is prepared to manage the more than $1.25 million in tax funds that it takes to run the County Attorney's office each year. COLLINS has offered suggestions to increase deputy attorney productivity. BRYSON says things are fine the way they are.

ISSUES

COLLINS speaks out on issues such as plea bargaining, preferential treatment, victim's rights, DUI, etc. BRYSON says nothing unless pressed. Check his ads.

DRUG DEALERS

COLLINS takes a NO PLEA BARGAINING position on drug dealers. BRYSON dismissed four (4) charges against a South American dealer who plead to a remaining charge and concurred when the dealer got 60 days in jail with work release, probation, and a $1,000 fine. Just one example.

SEX CRIMES

COLLINS takes a tough stand against plea bargaining sex crimes. BRYSON reduced two (2) first degree rape charges to unlawful intercourse over the objections of the 15-year-old victim and says he is tough on crime when the 30-year-old defendant got 60 days in jail on each of the two reduced charges and probation.

DUI

COLLINS informs the public of a deal in the making and offers to prosecute a prominent political figure for DUI. BRYSON declined to become involved and agreed with dismissal of the DUI charges. COLLINS takes a No PLEA BARGAINING position on DUI cases. BRYSON says that reducing DUI's is necessary and condons the dismissal of 351 DUI's in 1990. (From State Court Administrator's Record)

Penny stock documents leaked by SLC attorney

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — A Salt Lake City attorney has acknowledged being responsible for the leaking of documents linking Republican congressional candidate Karl Snow to a suspected penny stock manipulator. Daniel Darger said he provided the information to Snow's GOP primary opponent, John Harmer, last spring. Darger, a lawyer for the company, said he was not involved in the company's attempt to merge with Global Oil. Darger has said he witnessed meetings between Snow and Harmer, but Snow has denied those meetings and allegations that he had many contacts with Harmer. Darger said while it was true he had an office space with Snow's opponent, Bill Orton, he has no common office space with Orton. C. Petty — an attorney who represented Snow — said last spring, Daniel Darger learned Orton planned to run for Congress. He also learned from Petty about Snow's candidacy.

Darger said he wanted to let out what he knew about Snow, but he "didn't want to let it out to Ralph (Petty, Snow's friend)." Darger said he offered the material last spring to Orton, but Orton refused to use it. So Darger sent it to Harmer's campaign.

Orton has maintained throughout the campaign that unidentified individuals wanted him to jump on the Strand-Snow connection, but that he refused.

Orton confirmed that it was Daniel Darger who offered the material to him.

"I've refused every opportunity to get involved with that," the Democrat added.

Mickey W. Cochran, former campaign manager for Harmer, said he did receive two anonymous packets of documents about Snow and Strand.

Cochran said the Harmer campaign gave the packet to Snow and then when Snow did not release it in full to the public, Harmer's campaign anonymously released the documents to the press.

Bus service to be voted on Tuesday

Associated Press

SPRINGVILLE, — Voters will decide on Tuesday whether a two-year courtship of Utah Transit Authority will result in bus service coming to downtown Springville.

Joining the bus system would cost Springville residents an increase of one-quarter cent on the local sales tax.

After a series of public hearings this summer, UTA's board of directors approved Springville's request for the service on Sept. 18. The Springville City Council approved it in October, voting to submit the plan for voter approval.

Should voters add their support to the UTA proposal, the city could begin receiving bus service as early as next spring.

The proposed transit service would be an extension of the current UTA Provo-Orem Route 8, which serves the East Bay Industrial Park, BYU, University Mall and Utah Valley Community College.

Candidates seek better air quality

By JILL C. KAU
Senior Reporter

Wayne Hill, an Independent, and incumbent Malcolm Beck, Republican, are running for the Utah County Commissioner 'A' seat.

Beck has been the Utah County commissioner for one term, mayor of American Fork for 13 years and councilman for American Fork City for five years.

Hill said he has 25 years business management experience and is a home, office and small-business owner.

Both feel economic development and air quality are important issues in the election. However, their ideologies greatly differ.

"Economic development is critical," Beck said. "Utah County must provide jobs that meet the required standards to accommodate growth," he added.

Hill said encouragement of entrepreneurship must be at the heart of any economic development program. "While it is important to attract new industry to the valley," this must not be done "on the backs of locally-owned small businesses."

With regards to air quality, Beck said technology exists to have clean air and jobs.

He said most businesses are in compliance, but for those not in compliance, he recommends helping these businesses.

If these businesses refuse to comply, they must be shut down, he said.

Everyone has an obligation to strive for cleaner air, Hill said.

"A visible commitment to cleaner air will go a long way toward bringing in the kinds of clean industries that are needed to give economic balance and durability to our valley," he said.

Family planning able to promote understanding

By DARCEY MARSHALL
Universe Staff Writer

The Natural Family Planning is a birth control method that is 99 percent effective and 100 percent natural, said an NFP teacher.

Jody Phillips, mother of four and an NFP teacher with her husband, said, "In Natural Family Planning we focus on your own individual body."

It is unlike the rhythm method because "the rhythm method focuses on the calendar," Phillips said.

If the couples take it seriously, the method is very effective, she said.

It is also able to promote health and self-understanding.

Couples that use the method learn to observe, record and interpret fertility signs and symptoms.

They can then use this awareness to plan a family, according to an NFP pamphlet.

"In our classes we also gear towards morality and following the spirit," Phillips said.

Often, birth control methods are dumped on the woman, Phillips said. The classes help couples take joint responsibility in family planning, she said.

Phillips said she is telling people to regulate the spacing of children for the mother's health.

Classes in the NFP method will be offered Saturday at the St. Francis Church in Provo.

There are four consecutive monthly meetings.

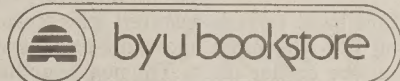

Those interested in registering should call 224-1814.

REVIEW

He also said he is looking for the people with the best chemistry.

Look for missions for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are Nathan Call, a 5-11 junior from San Diego, Calif. and Gary Trost, a 6-10 sophomore from Salt Lake City.

"We have as much talent this year as we did then," said Call, referring to the season that featured Smith (who is now with the Boston Celtics), Jeff Van, Brian Taylor, Marty Haws, Andy Toolson and Mike Sevitch. "What we don't have is experience," said

Coach Reid said he is hopeful Steve Schreiner will step into the leadership role for this year's team, which includes seven seniors, four juniors, four sophomores and four freshmen listed on the 1990-91 roster.

"You go into a season to win," said Schreiner, a 6-7 forward from Salt Lake City. Schreiner said his experience with the team will look to him for leadership.

In his first year here when we went to play at New Mexico, we were huddled at the free-throw line, and Coach Haws was yelling at me and I couldn't hear him. It was very nervous," said Schreiner.

A major concern for this year's team is the loss of 10 players. Scott Moon, a 6-1 senior from Farmington, N.M., doesn't think the Cougars will try to replace last year's all-WAC players Andy Toolson (now with the Utah Jazz) and Marty Haws. "Coach Reid will take the talent we have and mold it into a team. I think we will be as good as last year," said Moon.

Robert Jones, a 6-6 junior college transfer from Chicago, Ill., said he agrees that the Cougars have a lot of talent and believes the coaches will make all the difference this season.

"I came here because of the coaches," said Jones. "I don't think anybody has worked as hard as we have in getting ready for the season."

Charles Bradley, who is in his second year as an assistant coach, said the philosophy for coaching and recruiting players is the same as playing basketball.

"We coach and recruit as a (coaching) team," Bradley said.

"What BYU has to offer is different," he said. "All schools have gyms and nice facilities and fans, but we have Coach Reid," he said, pointing to Coach Reid. "BYU should be proud to have Coach Reid. That's why I came here," he said.

"Coach Reid is a great man and a great coach," said Bradley. "I wanted to push the fast-forward button to get here," he said. Jeff Campbell, a 6-9 freshman from Athens, Ala., said "I was impressed with how much Coach Reid cares for his players."

Coach Reid, who had hip surgery last summer, said his hips are fine but a little tender. Coach Reid walks with only a slight limp.

Van Wagenen, Johnson run for commission

By JILL C. KAU
Senior Reporter

Steve Van Wagenen, Democrat, and Richard Johnson, Republican, are running for the Utah County Commissioner 'B' seat.

Johnson served five years in the Utah County Planning Commission and was county delegate for the Republican Party two times.

Van Wagenen served for 12 years as deputy county clerk in the Utah County Commission office.

Van Wagenen and Johnson agree the key issues of this election are economic development, air and water pollution, the road through Provo Canyon and solid waste disposal.

"With reference to economic development," Johnson said, "We need to sell Utah County. Our best product is our young people."

"Attracting new business is important, but so is helping already-established businesses to prosper," Van Wagenen said.

She said, "We must do everything possible to clean up our environment.

Industry should be made accountable for properly disposing of their waste. Geneva is making a good faith effort, and I support them in what they are doing."

Johnson said, "None of us want to see the environment polluted. We have the capabilities to have clean air and industry."

Both feel the completion of the road in Provo Canyon is overdue.

The new Provo City courthouse located at 100 N. 100 West will officially open for business on Nov. 13 after more than a year of construction.

Mixed feelings surround opening of new courthouse

By RUTH CLARK
Universe Staff Writer

After more than a year of construction, the new 4th District Judicial Center in Provo will officially open for business on Nov. 13, and many of the employees of the old Provo City courthouse will be moving into their new offices.

Many of the workers have mixed feelings about moving into the new courthouse, located on the corner of 100 N. and 100 West.

Mike Havemann, court executive for the 4th judicial district, said some of the judges and court employees weren't happy to be moving, but the new courthouse was needed.

He said security, accommodations for the handicapped, space and needed technology were all issues considered in the decision to build a new courthouse instead of remodeling the old one.

Malcolm H. Beck, chairman of the county commission, said, "It would have cost quite a bit of money to remodel. The old courthouse is beautiful on the inside and out, and that kind of extensive remodeling would ruin the building."

Havemann said the old courthouse "is beautiful but not very functional in terms of usable space."

He said the old courthouse has 30,000 square feet of space, compared to the new courthouse's 59,000 square feet.

Security was a big issue, Havemann said. In the old courthouse, prisoners have to be taken through an entrance that is accessible to the public, up an elevator and through narrow hallways that are often filled with lawyers trying to confer with their clients, jurors, judges and other court officials.

Havemann said the Utah Supreme Court has overturned cases in the past because jurors have walked out of the courtroom, down the hall and talked to a witness or judge.

The new courthouse has separate divisions for jurors, prisoners, the public and the judges, he said, and secured elevators will be used to move the prisoners up and down.

The new courthouse was built with future considerable growth in mind. Some rooms were left unfinished for more clerks or needed office space, and the courtrooms are considerably larger than the courtrooms in the old courthouse.

Havemann said the new courthouse has the capability to video tape all proceedings, and if funds allow, court reporters may someday have on-line transcription, which would automatically transform their symbols into English.

Including the land it was built upon, the new courthouse cost $6 million to build, which Havemann called a good deal. He said that cost is $10 less per square foot than other comparable court buildings being built in the state.

Opening ceremonies will be held on Nov. 13, and an estimated 300 to 350 people, including judges, the Provo mayor and other officials will be in attendance. After the opening ceremony, the public is invited to tour the new facility, Havemann said.

Beck said the old courthouse will not stay empty. He said the county commission is looking into using the building as an art and cultural center, as well as housing the travel council and a handful of other departments.

Quayle says Saddam is a murderer, terrorist

By MICHAEL HAMMER
Senior Reporter

If America's objectives of complete Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait and restoration of the legitimate Kuwaiti government are met, there is still the potential problem of a Saddam Hussein left in power, Vice President Dan Quayle said Thursday.

"He is a terrorist and a murderer. What would prevent him from doing it again?" Quayle said at a press conference held at Provo Municipal Airport. Quayle was in Provo to campaign for Karl Snow, the Republican congressional candidate from Utah's 3rd district.

The world must be careful, Quayle said, since Saddam is clearly working toward military objectives, including nuclear capability.

If the administration's objectives are achieved, Saddam will have to be denied further military capability, the vice president said.

Stan Taylor, chairman of BYU's political science department, said short of war, there is no way to get Iraq to lose its military capabilities.

Taylor said the most optimistic scenario would be that Saddam would lose support domestically with his generals, which would entail his losing office.

This could happen without war, Taylor said, if the United Nations blockade continues.

"If it works to the point that Saddam has to withdraw and lose face," there could be a coup in Iraq, Taylor said.

Quayle said the president is doing everything in his power to resolve the gulf crisis peacefully.

Saddam Hussein can choose peace if he wants to, Quayle said. He can do it by "getting out of Kuwait and getting out now."

Others feel that the administration is not doing everything in its power to achieve peace.

"One never pursues every option," said Donna Lee Bowen, an associate professor of political science at BYU.

Bowen said the president should be more flexible in terms of negotiations; that negotiations should not be ruled out so adamantly.

Jim Toronto, assistant director of the David M. Kennedy Center for International Studies, said if war breaks out it will have extremely damaging effects on long term U.S./Arab relations which would also "increase the risk of Americans travelling in that part of the world."

Ellertson opposes Initiative A, favors review of tax laws

By GREG F. BROWN
Universe Staff Writer

R. Lee Ellertson, a Republican running for the 61st State Legislative District seat in the Utah House of Representatives, shared his views with The Daily Universe. The Universe was unable to get the comments of his opponent, John C. Paulson. Paulson is a candidate of the American Party.

Food Sales Tax: "I'm opposed to removing it. There are too many critical needs for the money to make cuts now." There may be room to make some tax cuts, but Ellertson said he favors a review of the whole system before making any decisions.

Environment: "We need to continue working on the environment." Geneva has made some good efforts in cleaning up the environment, but we need to continue, he said. "We need a commitment from state, as well as industry, if we are going to make a difference."

Education: "Utah can't be compared to other states. We have a higher percentage of our population in school." Ellertson is waiting for the state-formed task force to give its report, he said. "We need a long term plan. We can't keep troubleshooting each year."

Abortion: "I'm pro-life but do agree that it (abortion) is necessary in some cases of incest, rape or danger to the mother's life." Ellertson will vote for a measure that makes these exceptions.

Correctional Facilities: "We need to reduce the cost of corrections." We need to find a way to use the manpower of the prisoners more effectively. "Only about 300 out of 2,500 inmates work."

available for comment at home and was unlikely to return a telephone call.

In his own statement, Murdoch said Kinard had made a "significant contribution" to the station and wished him the best in future endeavors.

Kinard said he had been given leave for "stress-management problems." But he declined to address "rumors" about Howe, who is in a second week of paid leave suggested by management.

"To be honest with you, this is the first I've heard that he's resigned," Howe said Thursday.

She said she had not been asked to resign from her contract, which runs through December 1991, and was working with management to "figure out the best way to help the healing process at the station."

Howe had said her relationship with Kinard was professional and not the reason Brad Goode, her husband of 13 and a half months and an anchorman at rival KTVX, filed for divorce on Oct. 1.

Goode, who cited irreconcilable differences, filed the day after Kinard and Howe were seen on the same Oakland-to-Salt Lake flight the night of Sept. 30. Kinard and Howe both said it was a chance meeting.

Friends and co-workers said privately that Kinard's 50th birthday had been difficult for him and that his temperament seemed to have changed in the past year.

"He'd gotten pretty sharp with the staff," said one source who spoke on condition of anonymity. "He's had a very quick temper for a long time."

In April, KSL executives had warned Kinard not to be alone with Howe in or out of the newsroom, sources said.

SEAT "C"
UTAH COUNTY COMMISSION

VOTE
GEORGE F. TRIPP

LOW COST OF GOVERNMENT

As Mayor of Lehi, coupled with his service to over a dozen county agencies, George Tripp has exhibited the ability to balance budgets and to keep the cost of our governing bodies under control.

SUPPORTS CLEAN AIR AND JOBS

We can have a great environment and still be assured that jobs will be available. We need action not just the rhetoric.

WATER ALLOCATION AND UTILIZATION

George Tripp understands the need of this county for water. He will be a strong advocate in seeing that each city receive its fair share.

FISCAL CONSERVATIVE

With capable leadership the City of Lehi completed several projects during the two terms that George Tripp was Mayor of Lehi "Without a Tax Increase."

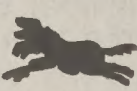

COUNTY JAIL

Forty years of experience in the building industry can be put to its highest and best use as George Tripp shares his experience and expertise with the new county jail.

TWO PARTY SYSTEM

We have a country that has profited greatly when two political parties work together for the common good of the people. Let's restore that system to our county.
